The MA in Communication, Digital Media, and AI is a fully online program for postgraduate students and working professionals who want to bolster their degrees and/or remain competitive in a career marketplace that values understanding how digital media technologies work. All courses will be delivered in an 8-week, online asynchronous format, and the program will be administered by UIC Extended Campus. The unique curricular focus of the program draws on the collective expertise of the faculty in UIC's Department of Communication. It will equip students to conduct independent and critical research and apply personal and professional experiences and case-studies to develop skills in data analytics, AI use, media literacies, and ethics. Additionally, graduates will become competent communicators in diverse organizational, digital, and public cultures.
