The Gender and Women's Studies Program at University of Illinois Chicago is a dynamic interdisciplinary unit committed to exploring the relationships between gender, sexuality, feminism, and social justice. Grounded in the foundational belief that gender and sexuality are critical aspects of social life, the program also emphasizes an understanding of these categories as they overlap with race, class, age, nationality, citizenship, and disability.

The program focuses on how these intersecting categories shape and structure various facets of culture, politics, social movements, and knowledge production. Living in a world marked by rapid changes in gender norms and expressions, we recognize the profound impact of gender and sexuality on both individual experiences and the institutions that structure society. The program's mission is to empower students with the knowledge and critical perspectives necessary to navigate this evolving landscape, especially amidst ongoing efforts to regulate the expression of diverse identities. Through active engagement with local, national, and transnational communities, faculty mentor students in developing the skills needed to confront the challenges of contemporary society.

Grounded in the liberal arts and sciences, Gender and Women's Studies, as both a major field of study and a minor, pays special attention to developing the ability of students to think critically, evaluate evidence, construct logical arguments, engage in moral reasoning, and write well. Graduates of Gender and Women's Studies programs have found employment in such diverse fields as social services, criminal justice, publishing, teaching, educational administration, health services, and public policy advocacy. Both the major and the minor in Gender and Women's Studies provide a strong foundation from which to apply to graduate school, as well as to professional schools like law and journalism.

In addition to the BA with a Major in Gender and Women's Studies and a Minor in Gender and Women's Studies, the Gender and Women's Studies Program offers the Minor in Social Justice.

Social Justice is an interdisciplinary field of study that critically explores issues and social movements focused on equality, fairness, and inclusion. The Minor in Social Justice seeks to provide students with the breadth and depth of knowledge to achieve this critical understanding of justice, equality, and marginality, both in the United States and in the world at large. The minor starts from the assumption that justice matters and includes a critical examination of what constitutes social injustice and how people have organized to redress conditions of inequality in politics, economics, social policy, and health. The Minor in Social Justice also attends to issues of disparity between dominant groups and those disadvantaged because of race, ethnicity, gender, sexuality, class, disability, or other identities, conditions, and social positions.
